Letter from the Founders

1999 was a year of exciting change for our Foundation. Two organizations, the William H. Gates Foundation and the Gates Learning Foundation, were consolidated into the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. Having outgrown the Foundation's first offices (located in Bill Sr.'s basement and above a pizza parlor), we moved into a new facility in Seattle.

Around the globe, advances in medicine, biotechnology and communication have provided unprecedented opportunities for improving people's lives. We have enjoyed learning about the art of strategic giving from people like Nelson Mandela, someone we admire immensely and were honored to host this year. We have found that giving away money in a strategic and meaningful way is as challenging, and interesting, as working in technology.

Our top priority remains supporting efforts to extend the reach of life-saving vaccines, and developing new vaccines against diseases that kill millions who live in poverty. Providing all children the same series of vaccines that we parents in developed countries tend to take for granted could literally save the lives of 3 million children a year. This is something that the global community can and should do together, with business, government and philanthropy each playing a role.

This year we also made a $1 billion commitment to launch the Gates Millennium Scholars Program. Over the next two decades, we will provide scholarships to 20,000 leaders who represent the diverse faces of America.

It is our hope that the investments we're making in global health and learning will serve as a catalyst to draw even more resources to these critical needs.

Best wishes,

William H. Gates

Melinda F. Gates

Overview

Continuing their generous and aggressive giving pace, Bill and Melinda Gates contributed an additional $15.8 billion to the Foundation in 1999. Their gifts raised the endowment to approximately $17 billion at the close of 1999, a vast philanthropic resource by any standard. However, when placed in the context of national and global challenges, it becomes clear that long term, systemic change will result only from highly focused and strategic grantmaking.

1999 Priorities

Extend the availability of existing vaccines to the world's poorest children

Every year, approximately 3 million children and adults die from diseases preventable by vaccines we have today. About one half of the children in sub-Saharan Africa have no access to routine immunization services. The other half receives a basic package of vaccines that does not include the standard immunization against hepatitis B, meningitis, and pneumonia, vaccines provided routinely to children in Europe and America. Vaccines provide the single most powerful strategy to improve the health and extend the lives of the world's children. Extending the reach of existing vaccines and developing new ones are the Foundation's top priority.

Research and develop new vaccines to prevent malaria, tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS

This devastating trio accounts for 5 million deaths each year. HIV/AIDS has killed the parents of 60,000 orphans in Africa alone. The annual financial burden of malaria has been estimated to be as high as $4.5 billion.

Preventive vaccines would not only save lives, but also ease the crushing burden these diseases place on the social and economic infrastructure of afflicted countries.

Address women's reproductive health needs

Reproductive health care is the primary health need of women, yet limited resources in developing countries, combined with women's economic and social position, often deprive women of access to the care they need and want. Increasing access to voluntary family planning services, providing emergency obstetrical care to enable women to safely carry and deliver babies, and preventing cervical cancer are examples of the kinds of work supported by the Foundation.

Eliminating Polio

The Multiplier Effect

A global effort to eradicate polio is on the verge of success. Millions of children will be saved from a lifetime of paralysis. The fruits of this collaborative effort, led by WHO and Rotary International, extend beyond the demise of a single disease. By ending the threat of polio for all people, for all time, funds that would have been spent preventing and treating polio can be allocated to other public health goals. A $50 million grant by the Foundation will primarily be used to strengthen the vaccine delivery infrastructure and to track where the disease is occurring, creating scaffolding that will be used in subsequent infectious disease control efforts. Overview

Close the Digital Divide

Innovations in information technologies are changing the way we learn, communicate and live our daily lives. However, poor communities, that arguably have the most to gain from access to computers, technology training and digital networks, are the least likely to have them. As part of its commitment to bring the promise of technology to neighborhoods in need, the Foundation is equipping every eligible library in the U.S. and Canada with high-powered computers, Internet access and technology training and support for librarians.

Building Support for Libraries

To ensure that grants have the net effect of raising local support for libraries, we require that grant applications include a signed commitment from the appropriate authority that funds will not be reallocated as a result of our support.

Open the doors to higher education

The Foundation has a 20-year commitment to support 20,000 students from ethnic and racial communities currently underrepresented in higher education today. Scholar-leaders showing academic promise, unmet financial need and demonstrated leadership are eligible for scholarships for college and graduate studies.

Equip learning leaders to integrate technology in schools

Using our home turf of Washington State as a laboratory, the Foundation sponsors the Teacher Leadership Program, a model for supporting teachers in their effort to infuse technology into the learning environment. A parallel effort, the Smart Tools Academy, aims to equip school principals and administrators for their leadership role in technology integration.

Grant Inquiries

Applying for a Grant

Every month, the Foundation receives about 1,800 requests for grants via email, phone, fax and letters. Regrettably, the Foundation is only able to provide funding to a relatively small number of qualified organizations.

The Foundation will consider letters of inquiry from tax-exempt, charitable organizations whose requests fall within program guidelines. Please note that the Foundation neither encourages nor generally considers unsolicited proposals. In keeping with its charter, the Foundation cannot accept proposals that benefit specific individuals or that serve exclusively religious purposes.
